Chateau sells first unit to Phoenix mayor

BY MIKE SORRICO / Phoenix Business Journal

The Chateau on Central housing project has been a poster child for the up-and-downs of Phoenix's housing market. The 21-unit upscale, Victorian-style brownstone development at Central Avenue and Palm Lane has hit construction delays since 2005 because of economic and financing problems, got caught up in the Mortgages Ltd. debacle, and eventually was sold via bankruptcy proceedings to a Wisconsin food

Help wanted: Hospitals looking to hire 4,000

BY ANGELA GONZALES / Phoenix Business Journal

Valley hospitals have jobs aplenty, with about 4,000 openings currently available for qualified candidates. Abrazo Health Care, which operates five local hospitals, is gearing up to hire nearly 500 people this year to support its growth. The hospital system hired more than 200 people in May and now is looking to fill about 150 nursing positions, said Gustavo de Koning, vice president of human resources for Abrazo.

De Koning said it is difficult to find nurses with experience in the operating room and intensive care unit, as well as those who specialize in cardiology. Experienced physical therapists, occupational therapists and speech therapists also are in demand.

Businesses step up in wake of Wallow fire's huge path of destruction

Owners, insurers preparing to handle fallout

BY KENNETH A. JOHNSON / Phoenix Business Journal

Business has been picking up for Allan Johnson, co-owner of the Molly Butler Lodge in Green. But as the Wallow fire consumes hundreds of thousands of acres in Apache, Navajo, Graham and Greenlee counties, he is worried that he will lose thousands of dollars during the peak tourist season.

While the lodge has been spared for now, Johnson still is concerned about smoke damage, the loss of food and beverages, exterior damage to the property and cleanup costs.

As firefighters continue their efforts to contain the Wallow fire in northeastern Arizona, Valley businesses and organizations are reaching out to help their neighbors in the high country.

The blaze was estimated at press time to have burned 470,000 acres and be about 20 percent contained. It is the wildfire in Arizona's recorded history.

"As this has progressed, the priority has been to get people of the communities and out of the way of the fire," said
